Getting There

“Today is the last day to pack,” said Mother. ... She used her black Sunday dress to wrap the wall clock. ... Isaac carried it across the passageway from the house to the barn, where Lena tucked it into the steamer trunk.

Isaac packed the pewter cups in a round handbasket that already had the water kettle, bone-handled knives, ham, onions, hard cheese, and roasted barley.

A break came every third day. Father unfastened the blade from the sod cutter. “The blacksmith will make it sharp,” he said.

Isaac was glad Herr Lepp did not come while Father was gone. ...Why did the old man make him do grown-up work? ... He clenched his fists when Father walked back while Herr Lepp rode on a horse beside him.
